Google plans legal challenge to block CU's Android order

Tech giant concerned that watchdog's decision can increase regulatory pressures in other jurisdictions oogle is planning a legal challenge to block a ruling by the competition Commission of India (CCI) to change its approach to its Android operating system, concerned that it will restrict how it promotes the platform, sources with direct knowledge of the situation tolk general.

restrict how it promotes the platform, sources with direct knowledge of the situation told Returers.

The Alphabet unit has been fined $275 intillion (2,265 crors) in two CCI decisions since less twock—one for its policies of charging in-app commissions and another for abusing its position in the market for Android operating system(OS).

The rullings come as Google faces increased antitrust scrutiny across the world. Last month, it suffered a major set-spack when a Buropean court upheld a 2018 rulling saying it was largely confirming a decision that the firm imposed "unlawful restrictions on manufacturers of Android mobile devices," Google plans to appeal the decision, where it faces a record $4.4-billion fine (833,761 crore).

The CCII-Android rulling, despite involving asmaller $162million (2,334 crore) fine, has worried Google since it seeks wider amging remedial measures, three sources sower of company's thinking said.

One of the sources said, Google was concerned that the CCI's decision cuid increase regulatory pressures in other jurisdictions and a legial appeal to block implementation of the antitrust directive was being planned within weeks.

Google declined to comment on its legal plans, returning its statement from last week that the CCI order was "a major set-mody face and the CCI's decision cuid increase regulatory pressures in other jurisdictions and a legial appeal to block implementation of the antitrust directive was being planned within weeks.
