London (Reuters) - Total Energies and ONGC have announced a partnership talks with the Indian government in India in a bid to explore oil and gas reserves in the country's exploration areas. The move has barely received attention from the Indian media in recent years.

Officials of Chevron of the US and ONGC have discussed opportunities in the Indian oil and gas sector last month, while ONGC and Total have formed a technical committee comprising key executives to consider various opportunities, people familiar with the matter said.

Conversations with the two energy giants were initiated after ONGC reached out to a dozen international oil companies a few months ago for possible alliances that could range from joint exploration and production to partnership in partner investments in the Indian firm's discovered and mature fields, to sharing of technology and setting up in the international arena.

Policy reforms in recent years appear to be driving up Chevron's interest in India, people cited earlier said. The two companies are likely to go in for more regular discussions before a strategic deal, they said.

With a market value of about $20 billion, Chevron is among the top oil and gas producers in the world. It is also part of the shrinking tribe of the oil majors willing to place big bets on oil and gas exploration despite rising pressure from climate activists.

Talks between ONGC and Total Energies are also progressing in other oil-rich countries of the two firms have interacted at least twice in two months and discussed opportunities to joint exploration, development of discovered resources, and international collaboration, the sources said. More discussions will follow before the two companies agree to a deal, they said.

Total, with a market value of $10 billion, already has a presence in India in the natural gas sector where it is building a liquefied natural gas (LNG) terminal and a large city gas distribution network in partnership with the Adani group.

ONGC already has a preliminary agreement with US-based ExxonMobil for partnership in the exploration sector. ExxonMobil is currently studying India's geological data to finalise exploration opportunities.

Instead of driving it alone, foreign players appear to be seeking a stable and dominant partner in ONGC that has decades of industry experience, deep knowledge of Indian geology, and a secure solvent pool. These factors after the sector was opened to the private sector, ONGC still accounts for more than 60% of the domestic oil and gas output.

Adani Group Launches Unit for Foray into Petrochemicals

Our Bureau

Mumbai: The Adani Group announced its intention to enter the petrochemicals business by registering a new company called Adani Petrochemicals Limited on Friday as per mandatory disclosures made to the stock exchanges.

The new company will be a fully owned subsidiary of Adani Enterprises (AEL), the flagship company that incubates most of the Group's new businesses, which are later spun off into separate listed entities once their business becomes viable.

"To carry on the business of setting up of petrochemicals complex, specialty chemicals units, Hydrogen and related chemical plants and other such similar units," Adani Enterprises mentioned the reason for setting up the new company as part of regulatory disclosures. The company has been set up with an authorised paid-up capital of ₹1 lakh.

In March this year, AEL had similarly set up a Kutch Copper Limited with paid-up capital of ₹1 lakh to enter the metals business.

In the past, AEL has incubated and later spun off businesses including Adani Ports, Adani Green, Adani Power Transmission, and Adani Total Gas. The company is reportedly considering listing off its airport business next.
