26. Overview of the entity's material responsible business conduct issues

In this reporting period, FY2023-24, we conducted a desktop-based materiality assessment, and the process we followed in detailed below.

We began by identifying key ESG issues under leading standards such as SASB, DJSI, and MSCI, specially focussing on the speciality chemicals sector. This involved a thorough analysis of the ESG criteria outlines by these international standards, ensuring we captured the most relevant and pressing topics for our organization. Following this, we reviewed the ESG material topics of both local and global peers and we considered four local and three global peers for our analysis. The identified material topics were then classified into the pillars of Environment, Social and Governance.

Next, we mapped these material topics against both peers and Industry standards. This process involved listing the material topics across the ESG pillars to identify the most relevant and critical issues for the organization. We also considered additional selection and rating criteria by assessing the performance of our peers across various rating agencies. This helped us identify potential gaps and focus areas that could be important to us. Furthermore, we collated risks identified by our organization, general industry risks noted by rating agencies and national bodies, as well as sector-specific risks by geography. Based on this comprehensive assessment, we provided a final list of material topics for management's internal review and assessment. Following a detailed review and discussion, the management validated and firmed up the material topics, ensuring they accurately reflect the company's impact and objectives.
