'Will focus on innovations to reach next 200 mn users'

Come rain or shine, MANISH TIWARY, vice-president and country manager, consumer business, Amazon India, never misses his physical gym runs. He runs at least 5 kilometers every day and uses Hoka Mach 5 running shoes. Tiwary is bringing the same mental and physical toughness to oversee day-to-day operations at the e-commerce giant and head an army of thousands of employees in India. In an interview with Peeroza Abrar at Amazon's office in Bengaluru's World Trade Centre, Tiwary says it is still early days for Amazon India. Edited excerpts.

Amazon launched its first shopping website in India in June 2012. How do you view these 10 years in the country?
 During the early days, we created a lot of applications (apps), which would be impacted less even in regions that did not have good network coverage. We were the first to use the "pay on delivery" model. We introduced various languages early, from English and Hindi to South Indian languages. We launched Seller Focuz, in which you can keep the inventory at your warehouse and use our technology, and we would pick up for orders and dispatch it reliably. We built a mobile app for sellers because they would not use a desktop. It is now available in 15 languages, besides English. Even for logistics, early on, we realised that in every neighbourhood, there are kirana stores that know everyone in that locality. We worked with them as delivery partners. Now millions of packets get delivered through this.

Amazon founder Jeff Bezos predicted that the 21st century was going to be the 'India century'. What are the new opportunities that you are looking at in the country?
 India promises to be an exciting country in the next decade. If you take the penetration of e-commerce, it will probably be about 3 per cent in fashion and 1 per cent in grocery. Now digital is with the fact that we are seeing the country with a young population, a young age profile. Our per capita income is hovering at $2,200-2,300. There is a lot of data that shows that once you start crossing a certain point, consumption explodes, and that is what happened with countries like China. If you line up these factors together, that is what our focus is going to be.

This is a much headroom for growth that we could have off this particular combination of factors for the next few decades. To do that, we have to do a lot of innovation (like live commerce) and reach the next 200 million customers. We need to innovate because what worked for the first 1.1 billion sellers might not work for the next set of sellers. Our innovations would also be focused on driving the market, which is getting more sellers, more selection, and our goods faster into the hands of the consumer.

Industry experts say that shopping across e-commerce platforms is growing slower than anticipated. Are we witnessing any slowdown in the e-commerce and retail sector?
 The growth in January last year can't be compared to January this year, as the Covid tailwinds last year were very high. But the rest of the businesses are doing well. I continue to be optimistic. There is a lot of innovation happening in the e-commerce space. Factors such as rising income and e-commerce are pushing the penetration and being very low will continue to play a role. Last year was the first festive sale after Covid, and it did go well. The way per capita is growing, consumption boost will also be significant. It should be a better Q1 with this year.

Amazon India recently increased seller fee for several key categories. Do you see this spurring other e-commerce players to increase the seller fee?
 Our seller fee philosophy is different. It's based on our cost of operations, which we believe is the sweet spot for our sellers to do business. We have a cadence where within a year the fee gets changed; sometimes they go up and sometimes they go down. There is nothing odd about this, some other marketplaces may look at it as a way to change their fee, but we would never do that at the expense of the seller's business.

Amazon recently said it would put $12.7 billion into Amazon Web Services in India by 2030. Do you see Amazon's India focus shifting from e-commerce to cloud computing?
 Whether it's cloud, 100 originals being produced on Amazon Prime Video, or digitisation of stores, it shows that Amazon continues to be bullish on India. Also, different businesses have different investment cycles. Building a data centre is a lot of investment, and then it plays out over time. The stores have different forms of investment. The big takeaway for me is that Amazon continues to be excited about what's happening in India.

You called some bets you made earlier, like food delivery and edtech. What kind of impact do you see on the macroeconomic uncertainty having on Amazon's India business?
 India continues to be the bright spot; the numbers are reflective of that. The layoffs are part of the people planning process and an annual procedure. You have examples of Prime Video and payments, and we are very excited about what we see. This is a company of builders. We try to experiment in new areas, and sometimes they work and sometimes they don't.

We had a couple of initiatives, which we call "sandboxing" within limited geography to learn more. When we assessed some of those businesses in the second half of last year, we felt it would be difficult to add value to the customer in a sustainable manner. We sunsetted them.
 At the same time, in the middle of last year, we started social commerce, and in February this year, we launched Amazon Live. There is no change in our intent to experiment with the right framework or our interest in investing in India.
