Stand on Issues

Republican candidates took extreme positions on abortion with some advocating that women shouldn't be allowed to get one even in the case of rape and incest.

In addition, Republican threats to social security and Medicare - two social programmes that most voters don't want to tamper with - proved to be a liability for Democrats.

A reason for voter dismay was the threat of Republican candidates chosen under the influence of former president Donald Trump. Many of them promoted the theory that Biden stole the 2020 election, a theory that didn't seem to stick. The electorate often was in a state of confusion in Ohio because in point.

Republican JD Vance defeated Democrat Tim Ryan mainly by walking a fine line. Vance started his political career as an anti-Trump Trump supporter just before of Hillary Clinton but soon joined the side. He then distanced himself from Trump somewhat and focused on working class issues. He has called his wife Usha, a Yale-educated Indian American lawyer his 'spirit guide' in the gubernatorial race. Ron DeSantis, Republican governor of Florida clarified a longstanding second term on a platform of defiance against Biden's pandemic policies. He opened schools and offices, going against federal guidelines and ordering support. DeSantis, a rising star, is seen as a potential presidential candidate in 2024 who could revive the Republican Party from Trump's shadow. Florida Democrats, Stacey Abrams losing her second bid to be governor of Georgia was disappointing news, resulting in hopes of many African Americans who see her as someone who could win the White House one day.

Even though Democrats were unable to create a clear message on the economy despite high concerns about inflation, high gas prices and rising crime rates through the summer, it appears the voters kept the big picture in mind. Biden had opened the campaign on September 1, warning that 'regularity and democracy are under assault' and he ended six weeks later with the same message. Most experts gave his strategy poor marks, but they were busy parsing his political instincts on Wednesday morning.

This was the most expensive midterm election so far, with over $1 billion spent across federal and state elections, according to OpenSecrets, a non-profit organisation.

Hope for H2

"Despite this, our prognosis for FY23 broadly remains unchanged on double-digit sales growth, with low single-digit volume growth," said Vinayak of Godrej Consumer Products.

Companies remain hopeful that the second half of the year could recover on the back of government interventions, reasonably good monsoon, and higher crop realisation.

"It has not been all gloom; as urban and premium discretionary categories fared reasonably well," Sougata Gupta, managing director of Marico, had told analysts last week. "Moderation in global commodities also helps well for the sector. While prices of both crude and palm oil have cooled down from their yearly high, the rupee's depreciation against the US dollar could put pressure on companies' plans for price cuts.

"India has been relatively more resilient," says Vinayak, who says more so quickly in the past few days." Sunil D'Souza, chief executive, Tata Consumer Products, told analysts in an earnings call last month.

Remain Indoors

Plants that are seeing strong sales include snake plants, jade, succulents and ferns.

Demand has increased also for vapourisers, Neb masks, respiratory masks, nebulisers and anti-allergic medicines. Medicines like Allegra and Claritin, which are used in the treatment of allergies, have witnessed a 1.2x surge in weekly demand while vapourisers have witnessed a 2x surge on Tata's tag, a spokesperson for the healthcare platform said.

Tata tag is also seeing a rise in demand for pollution-related diagnostic tests like allergy screens, IgG levels and phthalate. While doctors advise people with respiratory ailments and compromised immunity levels to remain indoors, where air pollution is high, companies selling immunity-improving products have started escalating advertising.

Dabur has released fresh ads on mainstream media for its eyebrow brush, talking about how it helps protect people from the impact of PM2.5.

Current Rules

Currently, long-term capital gains are in general taxed at 20%. Long-term capital gains tax in the case of equities is 10% if the total gain in financial year exceeds Rs 1 lakh. The short-term capital gains tax rate for equities and related assets is 15%. In the case of other assets, short-term capital gains are clubbed with income and taxed at the appropriate rate. "The taxation regime should not create unnecessary arbitrage among asset classes," said the official, adding that a review of tax rates was also needed but re-organising the asset buckets was more urgent. Policymakers have in the past also hinted at the need to amend the regime. Globally, taxation rules vary across different jurisdictions. Australia taxes capital gains made by corporates and individuals at the applicable corporate and individual income tax rates, respectively.
