Imran Khan thing hollow

SHUBHAJIT ROY

New Delhi, February 19

IN HIS FIRST statement five days after the Pulwama terrorist attack, Pakistan Prime Minister Imran Khan on Tuesday gave a sharp warning that Pakistan will "retaliate" if India launches attacks to avenge the February 14 Pulwama strike.

In a six-minute video message, Khan's tone and language was seen in Delhi as quite unusual for a democratically elected leader in Pakistan in the recent past.

Neither did he condemn the single bloodiest terrorist attack in Kashmir in the last three decades of militancy nor did he mention Jaish-e-Mohammed or its chief Maulana Masood Azhar by name.

This despite the fact that the Jaish claimed responsibility after a vehicle, driven by local resident Adil Dar, rammed into a CRPF bus killing 40 security personnel.

In a prepared statement on Pakistan Television, Khan said that Pakistan was ready to cooperate in the Indian investigation and will take action, if Delhi provides any "actionable intelligence". He also proposed a dialogue to discuss terrorism and raised the issue of Kashmir, something which has been part of every Pakistan leader's playbook in the recent years.

It is in the hands of Pakistan to start a war, however, it is not in our hands. In my opinion, this will go better. Therefore, I think sense will prevail, and intelligence and information will be said, hoping that through dialogue." Khan said, "You have blamed Pakistan for the attack without any evidence... Would Pakistan, currently hosting such an important conference (an investment conference) timed with the visit of Saudi Arabia's Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman... would anyone, even a fool, do this which would result in a sabotage of such an important conference? Why would we attack, how do we benefit from it?"
