PRESS RELEASE

KINGS INFRA CELEBRATES FOUNDER'S DAY

Born to Mary John and Sebastian John in 1917, in the coastal hamlet of Chavara in Kollam district, Kerala, Baby John stood out in history as a dynamic student leader, freedom fighter, a key figure in labour movement, a distinguished political leader, an administrator of remarkable efficiency and an unusual public man who espoused the cause of social entrepreneurship.

Shri, Baby John
(1917 – 2008)

As a teenager he plunged headlong into the struggle for Indian independence. Thereafter he embraced revolutionary socialism for the betterment of the oppressed classes, but was ever taking care to steer clear of anything that tended to give his cause a face that was less than humane.

What made him stand apart from his counterparts was his entrepreneurial spirit. When there were no takers for an invitation to join in an innovative fishing project in his native village, he ventured to bring capital, which opened a new world of livelihood for thousands and this laid the foundation for “KINGS” in the year 1958. It was this mindset and his ardent desire to improve the living standards of his community that prompted him to establish Kings as an innovative fishing company.

Baby John never allowed his dreams to get washed ashore by tides of time. He kept track of the corporate game, introducing new ideas, and of course, products. While renewing himself constantly, he was not daunted by short term goals.

BabyJohn's long legislative career began in the early 1950s when he was elected to the Travancore-Cochin assembly. For nearly four decades, Baby John was Chavara's trusted voice in the Kerala Legislative Assembly. An able and astute administrator, he served many terms as a Minister in the Government of Kerala, handling key portfolios such as Revenue, Education, Labour, Irrigation, Cooperation, and Excise earning him a reputation for unparalleled administrative skill.

All who knew him, knew him as the ultimate man to resolve conflicts. It was always Baby John who found a way towards coalescence and cooperation. In essence, a quintessential peacemaker.

Every year, Kings Group celebrates 28th October as Founder's Day. Today, we dedicate ground breaking of our new initiative, Kings Maritech Eco Park Limited, the first-ever state-of-art eco-friendly mariculture tech park on 126 acres of land at Tuticorin, where he started the first integrated aquaculture project in India in 1987.

As we honour the life and legacy of our Founder, Shri. Baby John, his vision and passion continue to inspire us every day. Our Founder taught us to “LIVE OUR DREAMS WITH COURAGE, CONVICTION AND COMMITMENT!!! “ – END
