Surrender value in a life insurance policy refers to the amount of money a policyholder receives if they decide to terminate (surrender) their policy before its maturity or before a claim is made.

This value is typically a portion of the premiums paid, minus any fees or charges and is calculated based on how long the policy has been in force and the amount of premium paid.

SURRENDER POLICY

The surrender value usually grows over time, meaning the longer you hold the policy, the higher the surrender value. However, surrendering a policy early in its term might result in a low or even zero surrender value, as most policies have a lock-in period during which no surrender value is available.

Surrendering a policy means that the policyholder forfeits the death benefit and the insurance coverage ends.
