Indonesian rescuers searching for a missing AirAsia plane carrying 162 people pulled bodies and wreckage from the sea off the coast of Borneo on Tuesday as relatives of those on board broke down in tears on hearing the news.

Indonesia AirAsia's Flight QZ8501, an Airbus A320-200, lost contact with air traffic control early on Sunday during bad weather on a flight from the Indonesian city of Surabaya to Singapore. The navy said 40 bodies had been recovered as dusk fell. The plane has yet to be found and there was no word on the possibility of any survivors. "My heart is filled with sadness for all the families involved in QZ8501," airline boss Tony Fernandes tweeted. "On behalf of AirAsia, my condolences to all. Words cannot express how sorry I am."

Pictures of floating bodies were broadcast on television and relatives of the missing gathered at a crisis centre in Surabaya wept with heads in their hands. Several people collapsed in grief and were helped away, a Reuters reporter said. "You have to be strong," the mayor of Surabaya, Tri Rismaharini,

A navy spokesman said a plane door, oxygen tanks and one body had been recovered and taken away by helicopter for tests. About 30 ships and 21 aircraft from Indonesia, Australia, Malaysia, Singapore, South Korea and the United States have been involved in the search of up to 10,000 square nautical miles.

The plane, which did not issue a distress signal, disappeared after its pilot failed to get permission to fly higher to avoid bad weather because of heavy air traffic, officials said. It was travelling at 32,000 ft (9,753 m) and had asked to fly at 38,000 feet, officials said earlier. Pilots and experts said thunders, threats and requests to gain permission to avoid them, was living unusual in that area.

The Indonesian pilot on the plane experienced and the plane underwent maintenance in mid-November, the navy said. The aircraft has been in service for about 23,000 hours in some 13,600 flights, according to Airbus. The plane was on a flight from Surabaya to Singapore when it disappeared. The plane was carrying 155 passengers and six crew members. The plane was flying at a speed of 353 knots, and the descent rate was 1,000 feet per minute. The plane was flying at an altitude of 32,000 feet when it disappeared. The plane was flying from Surabaya to Singapore. The plane was flying from Surabaya to Singapore.
