Diageo sues Mallya over $40 mn payout

Firm is also seeking about $141 mn over questionable payments made by companies affiliated with Mallya

BY SUZIRING & JEREMY HODGES LONDON

The suit comes as Mallya gears up for an extradition hearing in London next month over allegations of a billion-dollar fraud.

Weeks before London extradition hearing, Indian tycoon Vijay Mallya faces a second legal battle after Diageo sued to recover a $40 million payment made when he was ousted from United Spirits Ltd last year. Diageo filed the suit in London on Tuesday after setting out the grievances in its annual report in August.

Diageo also said it would release Mallya from liabilities flagged in the internal report. Mallya, who has been released on bail, said in a phone interview on Friday the Diageo suit was being reviewed by his lawyers and he would defend any action brought against him. He has also denied the allegations related to the Indian fraud charges.

Mallya left India nearly two years ago, saying he was moving to London to be closer to his children. He has since refused to return to India and said he fears an unfair trial amid the "media frenzy and hysteria" over the charges. Mallya, an avid Twitter user, has also said government agencies are pursuing a "heavy-handed investigation" and holding him guilty without trial. He has accumulated a net worth of $1.8 billion, according to Bloomberg.
