Wheat to reach record 98 mt in 2016-17 crop yr

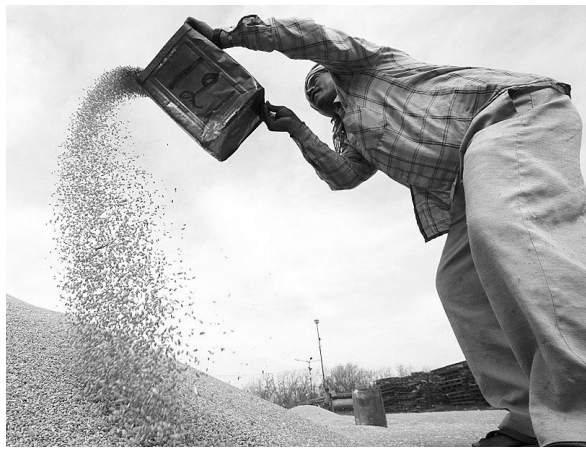

AGENCIES
New Delhi, 25 April

Wheat production is set to touch a record 98 million tonnes (mt) in the ongoing 2016-17 crop year ending June, on account of higher yields.

In its second estimate, the agriculture ministry had pegged a record wheat output of 96.64 mt for the current crop year (July-June) as against the actual output of 92.29 mt last year.

"Taking into account the feedback from state governments and experts, it looks like wheat output will reach all-time high of 98 mt this year," a senior agriculture ministry official told reporters on the sidelines of a two-day annual kharif conference.

The crop yields are better this year as weather condi-

In view of expected record output, the government is aiming to procure 30 million tonnes of wheat at the support price

tion during February-March remained favourable. There was no adverse temperature variation, which helped soil moisture remain normal for crop growth, he said.

In view of the expected record output on back of good monsoon, the government is aiming to procure 30 mt of wheat at the support price.

At present, the new crop is being harvested in full swing. Already, government agencies have procured more than 10 mt of the grain from states like Punjab and Haryana.

To ensure farmers get better price for their produce, the government has restricted imports by reverting to a customs duty of 10 per cent on the grain.

Meanwhile, agriculture minister Radha Mohan Singh said the government has set foodgrain output target at record 273 million tonne for the 2017-18 crop year and expects to achieve four per cent farm sector growth following the prediction of normal monsoon.

Foodgrain production is estimated to touch a record 271.98 million tonne (mt) in the current year (July-June) on account of good rains after two years of drought, according to the second estimate of the agriculture ministry.

Voot, Google join hands to launch mobile website

Google and Viacom18's over-the-top (OTT) platform Voot have joined hands to launch a video-on-demand (VOD) progressive web app. PWA is a webpage that acts like an app.

Google has developed PWAs for e-commerce portals such as Flipkart, but this is the first time it has launched a media app, specifically a video-streaming one, anywhere in the world.

For OTT platforms, especially since all of them are focusing on consumption via mobile, a challenge has been to reduce the number of uninstal-lations by users. Often, users consume content then uninstall the app, mainly because of limited space on their phones.

"Mobile websites in India are not very evolved and considering the data speeds in the country, they do not provide a very good experience. So, while people may want to watch some content, either because of limited memory on their phone or the not-so-pleasing experience of the mobile website, they may not come to a platform. We wanted to make sure that doesn't happen, and by introducing the PWA, we are casting a wider net because this means not only app-savvy users but those comfortable using mobile websites can also now watch Voot content with greater ease," says Gaurav

Gandhi, chief operating officer, Viacom18 Digital Ventures, the arm of Viacom18 that runs and operates Voot. - URVIL MALVANIA, Mumbai

DU to teach students how to write Facebook posts

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, 25 April

Delhi University is now planning to teach its English literature students how to write Facebook posts.

The varsity had recently proposed adding bestselling author Chetan Bhagat's debut novel Five Point Someone as a General Elective paper for students of honours courses other than English, a choice that drew sharp reactions on the social media.

The university wants Facebook post writing to be part of a course on academic writing. A committee in the varsity's English department recommends the same.

The department has sent a proposal detailing the recommendations to all colleges teaching the honours course in literature studies and has sought feedback.

"Writing does not necessarily mean heavy-weight non-fiction books or highly dramatised fiction. It also includes writing general but important content properly such as blog posts, cover letters, or Facebook posts," a senior official of the English department said. "The proposed components will be part of the Skill Enhancement Courses. The final framework will be decided after receiving feedback from colleges, the deadline for which is May 1. The approved draft will then be placed before the academic and executive council for final nod," she added.
